The Torment of Unforgiveness

By Nathan D. Pietsch

Dawn and I pray for multiple people a week in one-on-one appointments. We work along side a few others on a ministry team. A young women in her twenties named, "Amanda" came to us for prayer. It was such a sad situation, and this appointment was flagged as an "emergency."

When Amanda was a little girl, she was violated over and over by her family members. Almost every person in her family molested her, including the women. Amanda's mind was tormented with revenge, hatred, and murder. All she could think about was killing predators who prey upon little children. As a result of her hatred, she was very tormented.

Deep down, we knew Amanda's primary issue was unforgiveness. She was living a tormented life Jesus spoke of in Matthew 18:21-35. In this section of Scripture, Jesus shared a parable of an unforgiving servant. As a result of the servant's bitter heart, he was handed over to the torturers.

Through a very sensitive and tedious process, we were able to lead Amanda into an encounter with Jesus. The Heavenly Father, Jesus, and Holy Spirit revealed to Amanda the necessity of forgiving the predators who violated her. She was able to forgive from deep inside. As Amanda forgave each individual, Jesus healed the roots of her hidden core pain. Once she was able to forgive, the tormentors lifted off her life.

The summer is a great time to explore in the woods.

A magenta colored wild flower.

A Stellar Jay lost its feather.

Deep in the forest.
